NEGOTIATE LOANS ON REAL ESTATE

Clarke County lies at the head of the noted Shenandoah Valley. Jefferson county, West Virginia, is its northern boundary; the Blue Ridge Mountains form its eastern boundary, dividing it from Loudoun and Fauquier counties. Warren county is on the south and Frederick on the west. The Shenandoah river flows through the eastern part of the county, at the foot of the Blue Ridge. In aggregate agricultural wealth Clarke county is probably the richest county in the State. The exhaustless fertility of her soil, the healthfulness of her climate, and the beauty of her diversified landscape, are subjects that charm the tongue and admiration of all who have ever visited this county. The surface of the main part of the county is gently undulating—just sufficiently for drainage. The soil is lime-poor and peculiarly adapted to the growing of wheat and corn, clover and timothy. Blue grass is indigenous, and such forms on unimproved lands as well as the far-famed fields of Kentucky. Large numbers of cattle, sheep and hogs are raised and sold, and Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York markets, and many fine horses sold to city buyers.

Good roads traverse the county in every direction, and four macadamized turnpikes center at Berryville, the county seat, which contains a population of about 1500. Pure mountain water from the top of the Blue Ridge is piped into the town by the gravity system, and the town is lighted by Acetylene Gas. There are eight churches in the town, and good private and public schools—school houses supported by county and state being located at Berryville, and in the other parts of the county. Taxation at a cash valuation of property is about $1.00 for all purposes—State, county, schools and roads.

The Shenandoah Valley division of the Norfolk and Western Railroad extends through the center of the county, affording ready means of travel, and shipments of products either north or south. Besides this railroad, the Southern Railroad from Washington and Alexandria with terminals at Bluemont, eight miles from Berryville, runs 3 trains daily to and from Washington, and the Shenandoah River Railroad, which extends from Bluemont, which will cross the county from east to west, placing us within 90 miles of the national capital.

Several large tracts of land are for sale. I do not advertise any of the most desirable properties I have for sale, but if parties desiring to buy will send me a description of the kind and size of farm wanted, it will prove a guide in selecting from my list—or enable me to negotiate a purchase for them. Should applicants by letter, or parties coming here, be unable to suit themselves, and desire to look around at properties in the adjoining counties of Frederick, Warren, Loudoun or Jefferson, I will be pleased to accompany them, or give them letters of introduction to real estate agents in those counties with whom I have reciprocal relations.

To Land Buyers.

I request, as a matter of courtesy, that after I have introduced you to the owner of real estate through my advertisement or otherwise, and you have determined to purchase, that you will close the contract through me, so that my commission will be secured.

I have several good business and residence properties in Berryville for sale. Parties wanting a home or desirous of engaging in business in the town, would find it to their interest to confer with me.

DRAGGING down pains are a symptom of the most serious trouble which can attack a woman, viz: falling of the womb. With this, generally, come irregular, painful, scanty or profuse periods, wasteful, weakening drains, dreadful backache, headache, nervousness, dizziness, irritability, tired feeling, inability to walk, loss of appetite, color and beauty. The cure is that marvelous, curative extract, or natural wine, of herbs, which exerts such a wonderful, strengthening influence on all female organs. Cardui relieves pain, regulates the menses, stops drains and stimulates the womb muscles to pull the womb up into place.

WINE OF CARDUI

It is a sure and permanent cure for all female complaints.

WRITE US A LETTER

Put aside all timidity and write us freely and frankly, in strictest confidence, telling us all your symptoms and troubles. We will send you no advice (in plain, sealed envelopes) how to cure them. Address: Ladies' Advisory Dept., The Chattanooga Medicine Co., Chattanooga, Tenn.

"I SUFFERED AWFUL PAIN in my womb and ovaries," writes Mrs. Naomi Baker, of Webster Groves, Mo., "also in my right and left sides, and my menses were very painful and irregular. Since taking Cardui, I feel like a new woman, and do not suffer as I did. It is the best medicine I ever had in my house."

WHAT HE WOULD DO.

Colonel Hayes Had an Answer Ready For General Scott.

Of Colonel John C. Hayes, who served with distinction under General Winfield Scott in the Mexican war, an amusing story is told by T. E. Parish in his "Gold Hunters of California." Hayes, with his command, had been out scouting. On his return he made no report to General Scott, who sent for him. General Scott was a veritable martinet in enforcing military discipline. After Hayes was seated in the commander's headquarters Scott said, "Colonel Hayes, I have received no report of your expedition against the padre." "I did not think it worth while," said Hayes. "Every officer of the army is required to make a full report of everything to his superior officer. Please make your report verbally."

Hayes began by saying that he struck the padre's trail on a certain day, followed it for two days, and on the third day, while his command was resting at noon and taking their siesta, the old padre came down on them. The "boys" gathered themselves together and whipped the Mexicans off, killing quite a number of the padre's command. His own loss was insignificant—one killed and three wounded. "Surprised you, eh?" queried Scott. "Yes; we were not expecting him." "Where were your pickets?" "Did not have any."

"What?" shouted General Scott. "A colonel in the regular army of the United States go into camp in the heart of the enemy's country and never place a picket on guard? What would you do if surprised when asleep?" "Shoot the first man that waked me up!" was the cool reply.

THE PUZZLE TANKARD.

It Was a Feature of the Seventeenth Century Tavern.

"This is a puzzle tankard," said the antiquary. "Try it."

The tankard, of peculiar shape, with odd little spouts protruding from it in unexpected places, was made of blue glazed ware, and on it was scratched the stanza:

From Mother Earth I claim my birth;
I'm made a joke for man.
But now I'm here,
I'm filled with good cheer,
Come taste me if you can.

The old man filled the vessel with fair water, and the youth tried to drink. He could not, though, and if you could empty it down your throat you got your drink for nothing. Otherwise you must stand trout. Many a seventeenth century laugh these puzzle tankards must have caused.

"It was, you know, quite impossible, unless to solve a tankard's secret. The secret of this tankard of mine is to place your little finger over the further spout, your thumb over that one and your left hand thumb over the bulb. Now you can drink, you see, from the small underspout in comfort."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

An Appreciative Welshman.

The following tasty inscription is from a family manuscript received by a Welsh landowner and magistrate in Merionethshire. To expend turf winnings on erecting a tomb looks at first sight eccentric, but possibly the builder was moved by the reflection that betting has brought many to their graves:

As to my latter end I go
To seek my father's tomb;
I bless the good horse Bendigo,
That built this tomb for me.

The Persimmon's Beak.

There is a persimmon tree growing as the crow's beak which was formerly much in use among men of rank in Persia and north India. It was a horseman's weapon and consisted of a broad curved dagger blade fixed at right angles to a shaft, pike-shaft fashion. The shaft inclosed a dagger, unscrewing at the butt end. This concealed dagger is a very common feature of Indian arms and especially of the battle axes of Persia.

A Good Impression.

This ability to bring the best that is in you to the man you are trying to reach, to make a good impression at the very first meeting, to approach a prospective customer as though you had known him for years without offending his taste, without raising the least prejudice, but getting his sympathy and good will, is a great accomplishment, and this is what commands a great salary.—Success Magazine.

Not For The Larder.

"Suppose the butcher," said the teacher, "asks 25 cents a pound for mutton chops, what would three pounds come to?"

"Well," replied Susie Wise, "they wouldn't come to our house. Mom would never pay that much for chops."—Philadelphia Press.

FALCONRY.

It Was a Favorite Sport of Many English Monarchs.

Richard I. when in the Holy Land amused himself with hawking on the plain of Sharon and is said to have presented some of these birds to the sultan. Later on, while passing through Dalmatia, he carried off a falcon which he saw in one of the villages, and he refused to give it up. He was attacked so furiously by the justly indignant villagers that it was with the utmost difficulty that he managed to make his escape.

King John used to send both to Ireland and to Norway for his hawks. We are told by Froissart that when Edward III. invaded France he had thirty falcons and every day either hunted or went to the river for the purpose of hawking. Henry VII. imported goshawks from France, giving 44 for a single bird—a much greater sum in those days than at present. Henry VIII. while hawking at Ilchester was leaping a dike when the pole broke, and the king was immersed head first into the mud and would have perished in all probability had not his falconer dragged him out.

Elizabeth and James I. were much interested in the sport. The latter sovereign indeed expended considerable sums on its maintenance. Asquith in his "Miscellanies" says, "When I was a freshman at Oxford I was wont to go to Christ church to see Charles I. at supper, where I once heard him say that as he was hawking in Scotland he rode into the quarry and there found the covery of partridges falling upon the hawk, and I remember his expression further, 'And I will swear upon the book 'tis true.'"—Chambers' Journal.

LEGENDARY DEVICES.

How Strange Animals Appeared in Heraldry in Old Days.

Early writers on natural history subjects make mention of many strange creatures that never could have existed save in the superstitious mind of the age in which they wrote, and of the many that did exist the accounts of their structure and habits are so ludicrous that one may really wonder if it was possible, even in the middle ages, that people could be so credulous. Many of these strangely garbled records of the animal world were, no doubt, due to travelers' tales and probably had a certain foundation in fact. It is difficult indeed to account for the creation of such things as the phoenix, the cockatrice, the wyvern, the griffin and the dragon. The belief in the existence of the unicorn may have originated from the fact of some of the early African travelers meeting with certain antelopes that had lost a horn. For it is a peculiarity with most animals that their horns are never shed and if injured or broken never grow again.

The horn, growing out of the forehead, betwixt the eyes, is neither light nor hollow nor yet smooth like other horns, but hard as iron, rough as any file, revolved into many plights; sharper than any dart, straight and not crooked and everywhere black, except at the point.

Bartholomew asserted that there were many varieties of unicorn, and this would be feasible if this creature had been created from those horned beasts that had accidentally lost one of the horns.

How the phoenix was called into being it would be impossible to hazard a guess. It was popularly supposed that there was only one creature existing in the whole universe in which there was only one tree in which it built its nest. We find mention of the phoenix as far back as Pliny, who says, "Howbeit, I cannot tell what it is, but, first of all, whether it be a tale or no, that is never lost one of them in the whole world, and the same not commonly seen."

In the fifteenth century we find Bartholomew writing of this imaginary bird.

"Phoenix is a large bird, and there is but one that kind in all the wide world, therefore level men wonder thereof. Phoenix is a bird without mate (mate) and liveth 300 or 500 years. When the which years be passed she feedeth her default and feebleness and maketh a nest of sweet smelling sticks that be full dry, and in summer when the western wind bloweth the sticks and the nest be set on fire with burning heat of the sun and burneth strongly."

The bird then allows itself to be reduced to ashes in this fire—on this point all the writers agree—and in due course rises again from the ashes in the full glory of renewed youth—and is the most fairest bird that is, most like to the peacock in feathers, and loveliness and gathereth his mate of clean greens and fruits."

The basilisk, or cockatrice, was reputed to be some strange mixture of a bird and serpent, able to slay with his breath and his sight, which power was accredited by some to dragons—Westminster Gazette.

A Persistent Nest Builder.

One of the most energetic nest builders is the marsh wren; in fact, he has the habit to such a degree that he cannot stop with one nest, but goes on building four or five in rapid succession. And there is nothing slovenly about his work either. Look among the cattails in the nearest marsh, even within the limits of a great city, and you will find his little woven balls of reed stems, with a tiny round hole in one side. There is a certain method even in his madness, for the nest in which his wife is brooding her seven or eight eggs is less likely to be found when there are so many empty ones around. Then, too, he uses the same as roosting places for himself.—Recreation.

FARM FOR SALE

A FARM, consisting of 665 acres, lying on the Blue Ridge Mountain, 14 miles from the Government Weather Bureau. 300 acres of this land is cleared and good smooth farming land. Would make a fine fruit farm. The remainder is in oak, poplar, chestnut, pine and locust timber. There is an excellent stand for a store, and a business man could clear $75 per month on the store alone. A good Grist Mill is located on the farm. The proposed Trolley Line from Winchester to Washington will cross the farm. An abundance of good Building Stone upon the farm, and limestone for liming purposes within 4 miles. This property will be sold at an extremely low price.
